

The Big Shadow Trade

Trading foreign exchange on margin carries a high level of risk, and may not be suitable for all investors. The high degree of leverage can work against you as well as for you. Before deciding to invest in foreign exchange you should carefully consider your investment objectives, level of experience, and risk appetite. The possibility exists that you could sustain a loss of some or all of your initial investment and therefore you should not invest money that you cannot afford to lose. You should be aware of all the risks associated with foreign exchange trading, and seek advice from an independent financial advisor if you have any doubts.

This trade is called the big shadow, and soon you will see why.

The big shadow is very similar to the kangaroo tail. However the pattern involves two price bars.

Here is an example of a big shadow (the last price bar is the Big Shadow).

Here are the characteristics of a Big Shadow, a two bar formation:

1. The big shadow pattern takes place at an extreme.
2. The big shadow pattern takes place at a support/resistance zone.
3. The second bar has a greater range than the first bar.
4. The very best shadow patterns have a lot of “space.”
5. The big shadow pattern often indicates a market turning point.

Let us look at each characteristic in isolation.

The very best shadow patterns have a lot of “space.”

The very best big shadows print on the chart with a lot of space. “Space” simply means that the bar has printed in an area on the chart that has not recently seen price action. If you see a big shadow that has printed on an area on the chart and there is a lot of open space to the left of the bar, then this price bar has “space.”
